

John Moore Found Dead In Bed

Orland Township Official Dies of Heart Attack

John N. Helenhouse, aged 56 years, constable of Orland Township and former Fire Chief of Orland Park, died suddenly of a heart attack in the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet last Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

He had been subject to heart trouble for the past two years, improving for a while and then suffering a relapse. While at work in his Barbershop February 22 he was stricken with a severe heart attack. He was taken to the Silver Cross hospital and returned home the following Sunday. Last Thursday morning he was again taken to the same hospital and passed away suddenly that afternoon.

He was born May 24th, 1888 in Surry, Indiana, the son of Conrad and Rachael Helenhouse and came with his parents to Orland Park in 1892 and has resided there since with the exception of a short residence in Mokena and southern Illinois.

He was united in marriage with Miss Caroline Marti of Mokena June 26, 1911. To this union one son was born.

The deceased operated a barbershop in the McGovney building in Mokena now occupied by the post-office about 40 years ago. After returning to Orland Park he opened a barbershop and has been operating it up to the time of his recent fatal illness.

Mr. Helenhouse was in public life for many years serving the village of Orland Park as fire chief for many years. He was instrumental in providing fire protection to outlying farms as well as the village of Orland Park when he conducted a successful campaign to raise funds for the purchase of a fire truck. After a number of years when this equipment became inadequate he again conducted a fund raising campaign and the present modern fire fighting equipment was purchased. He also was instrumental in having the Orland Park Vol. Fire Department sponsor Labor Day picnics and big Labor Day parades which always drew great crowds to Orland Park.

A few years ago he figured very prominently in a legal controversy when the question arose whether the village board had jurisdiction over the fire truck or the fire department and when he refused to turn the fire truck over to the village board of Orland Park a suit was instituted in the court of Judge John Prystalski in Chicago and the latter found in favor of the village board after which Mr. Helenhouse ceased to hold the office of fire chief.

He was elected to the office of constable of Orland Township in 1937 and has held this office since. He was a candidate for re-election at the town election to be held April 3, but since his death his name has been withdrawn.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the Methodist church in Orland Park with Rev. Henry Rompel officiating. Mrs. Geo. Gee Jr., and Mrs. Edw. Gee sang several songs.

The floral tributes banked the altar and the casket was set in a veritable floral garden. A very beautiful floral piece bore a gilt band with the wording "Orland Township Officials". The church was filled beyond capacity by the hundreds of friends and townspeople who came to pay their last tributes of respect. Interment was made in the family lot in the St. John Cemetery, Mokena.

The pallbearers were: Walter Smith, Ralph Agate, Franklin Loebe, Archie Kay, Henry Kimmel and Andrew Braasch.

Surviving are one son Pfc. Harold serving in the armed forces in Italy; daughter in law, one grandson two sisters, Mrs. Clara Moore of California and Mrs. Alice Einhorn of Blue Island, a nephew serving with the armed forces in the southwest Pacific.

The wife of the deceased passed away Nov. 28, 1942.

Injured In Automobile Accident; Taken To Hospital

While returning from Chicago where they had taken a load of steers Mr. Burton Reiter of Orland township and his brother Mr. Ralph Reiter were involved in an automobile accident last Monday at 111th and Ridgeland Ave. in which Ralph was seriously injured.

Slippery road conditions caused Burton to skid across 111th St. and strike another car causing both truck and car to leave the road and crash into the cemetery fence.

Occupants of the other car, which was demolished, and Ralph, were taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital where it was necessary to take 41 stitches in Ralph's scalp. He is recovering nicely and expects to return home Sunday.

Ironically enough, while Mrs. Ralph Reiter and her son were driving to the hospital Saturday to visit Ralph they were also struck by another car. However no damage was done and no one was injured.

MORE DETAILS OF MISSING MOKENA BOY RECEIVED FROM WAR DEPARTMENT

Mr. Louis Lauffer of Mokena has received the following letter from Maj. Gen. N. F. Twining of the U. S. Army relative to the former's son Edward who has been reported as missing in action over Vienna, Austria:

FIFTEENTH AIR FORCE
Office of the Commanding General
APO 520
26 February, 1945

Mr. Louis Lauffer
Mokena, Illinois.
Dear Mr. Lauffer:

You are no doubt aware that much of the recent success of the allied armies in Europe is due to the constant pounding of enemy targets across the continent by our air forces. On February 13, 1945 your son, First Lieutenant Edward L. Lauffer, O-265785, participated as the navigator of his ship in a combat mission to Vienna, Austria. As the craft failed to return to the base, Ed and his crew have been missing in action since that date.

Our information indicates that his bomber received a direct hit by flak while it was over the target. The craft remained with the formation about two minutes before it went into a slow downward glide. Before the ship passed from sight four or five parachutes were seen to emerge. Should there be a change in Ed's status the War Department will notify you at once.

His personal possessions have been assembled for shipment to the Effects Quartermaster, Army Effects Bureau, Kansas City, Missouri, who will in turn forward them to the designated beneficiary.

In recognition of meritorious achievement in operations as the navigator of his craft your son has been awarded the Air Medal. You may be very proud of the splendid record of service which Ed has established.

Very sincerely yours,
N. F. TWINING,
Major General, USA
Commanding

The Air Medal was awarded at the time of his 14th mission. The flight in which the bomber was hit was his 15th sortie or 29th mission.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Indication of What Is to Come

As marines wipe out Jap airfields within 750 miles of Tokyo on Iwo, the clearing of Manila bay for American ships continues and pattern of two-way thrust on Nippon grows steadily clearer. Some observers consider the thrust up from Iwo to be the quick way, but others insist the smash must come from the South China coast and Formosa. Many observers seem to think that all indications are that the Japanese islands will be conquered before attempting direct combat in Asia.

Dragon's Teeth Prove No Barrier

Infantrymen of the 90th U. S. division demolish part of the dragon's teeth of the Siegfried line in Habscheid, Germany, as they move to the front. Most of the barriers were made of reinforced concrete, but had little effect on the forward march of American troops. TNT and new tank guns were able to clear the way without great difficulty.

SNAPPY FACTS

ABOUT

Spare synthetic tires carried on vehicles should be protected against sun and weather. Synthetic casings are particularly subject to sun checks, the beginning of cracks and mileage wasters.

Botanists designate the Eucommia ulmoides as "the only hardy rubber tree." It is an ornamental tree with 3 per cent rubber content, an amount that does not encourage commercial extraction.

Tests have demonstrated that in many respects typewriter and business machine rolls or platens of synthetic rubber are equal or superior to those of natural rubber.

When drying a hairbrush, put the bristle-side down. If bristles point upward, water will drain onto wood block holding the bristles, in time causing it to split.

Keep empty spools and as scraps of embroidery floss, string, tape, etc., accumulate, wind on separate spools. It helps keep the sewing basket orderly.

To air bedclothes indoors, hang them over the radiator. The heat will air them very quickly.

Cover scratches on dark furniture by touching with iodine. When dry, polish.

Be careful in the use of your electric cords so wires will not be exposed, or let the two bundles of wires touch each other. When removing cords, handle carefully, rather than twisting or yanking them. Keep all cords dry. Do not fasten to baseboards with staples or nails.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Amos Croy and his wife settled on a farm in Missouri, where Homer was born. Homer was the first Croy to finish high school and college. He went to New York, secured a position on a woman's magazine, married, had two children, a boy and girl. His first novel was "Boone Stop." Having lost both his father and mother, he took his family to visit Europe. Paris, in fact France in general, did not appeal to him. It was while on this trip that Homer Jr. took suddenly ill and died. Americans, strangers all, came to his aid and helped in every way possible, proving that the country he meant something. They returned to America disappointed with Europe.

CHAPTER XXII

"Well, I suppose I could go to work at my regular Hollywood salary. But I would have to have my expenses."

"I'd have to take that up with Chicago."

"That's the very least I could afford to do the job for," I said, once more the businessman. "You know, that's working pretty cheap."

He nodded understandingly at the plight of the workingman.

"I'll call Chicago and let you know."

The elevator and I floated down together.

It wasn't long before I was living in Chicago in the Stevens Hotel with all expenses paid. Oh boy!

I went out on a tour of three states and found that a "dealer" was a filling station man. One day, "to get the feel of it," I went out on an oil truck and helped deliver gasoline and fuel oil to farmers in Wisconsin, and finally I wrote the "training film." It was filmed in Hollywood under the title Stan, and was shown in the Midwestern states controlled by that company—the most ambitious training film that had ever been made.

Then came the great—the wonderful—moment. I put all the training film money carefully aside, some magazine stuff I had already written sold, so when I was through with the film I hurried home to Missouri as fast as I could go and went in to see the representative of the eastern insurance company. I asked him how things were. They were just plain bad, he said as only an insurance company representative can say it. And there was the situation on the Croy farm. His company had been riding him. He looked pretty disturbed.

"Well," I said, "I suppose I had better pay that off."

He smiled pleasantly; one of my jokes.

"Let's figure up how much it is," I said and hauled out a check.

"You mean all of it?" he gasped.

"I might as well do it now as any time," I said as if paying off a mortgage was a morning's trifle.

Then I had a glimpse into a field that made book writing seem as dependable as a corner post. After I finished "Family Honeymoon," which I consider my best comedy, I sat looking at it with paternal pride; maybe it would make a play. Then and there I condensed the plot into these lines:

"A professor in the Middle West falls in love with a young and attractive widow who has four children. He proposes and is accepted. As the happy bride and groom are getting ready to leave they are forced, at the last moment, to take the children along on the honeymoon. Many strange things happen, but in the end all is well and happiness again reigns."

I sent this with a note to Owen Davis, and in no time at all he had me on the telephone. He was in the middle of a play of his own, he said, and had two commitments on his desk, but he liked the honeymoon idea, and would I send him the manuscript?

I got it to 35 East 76th Street so fast that he must have thought the messenger was already downstairs.

Forty-eight hours later Owen Davis telephoned that he had read it all in one night and that he was willing to drop everything and start the professor and his bride off on their honeymoon. I was delighted. The theater-wise Owen Davis! After a while, over the pounding of my heart, I heard him ask:

"When can you come to the Hotel Astor and have lunch with me?"

I said I could come today.

He had, I discovered, a regular table in the Hunting Room. Some luncheons you never forget, and I'll never forget that one. Not what we ate, but what we talked about, and the feeling of buoyancy and tremendous delight I had to be alive and a part of this fine world.

As we built up the humorous situations, we laughed so delightedly that people turned and stared. But that was all right with me. Some day they'd be laughing at the play and paying us money for the privilege.

After lunch we went to the office of Richard J. Madden, the play agent, and Owen Davis told him the terms he would give me. I was so pleased that Owen could have said that he would just give me a pass to the show and I would have been satisfied. A play on Broadway!

"Come back tomorrow and I'll have the contracts ready," Madden said, and, when we went back, there they were, stacked as high as his desk lamp. We signed them, me very meticulously, but to Owen they were just another contract, for he had had two hundred and eighty plays produced.

Richard J. Madden gave a news item to the New York Times: Never before in theatrical history had a novel been accepted for dramatization before it had been published. Well, that was my speed.

Owen started work at once and each morning would call me up and tell me how a scene had worked out. Owen has a way of holding a receiver across the room from him and whispering into it, but that was all right with me. It was about my own brain creation which would soon be pulling them in from the sidewalk. Those people in the Hunting Room who had stared!

He finished the play in exactly twenty-one days, had it typed by the only woman in New York who can read his handwriting, and took a copy to Richard J. Madden. The next day Richard J. Madden called up and was so excited he asked us to lunch.

"I'll sell it in two weeks," he said.

He was pretty weak on his guessing, for it took two days more than the time he'd promised. Owen called up and said, "Vinton Freedley wants it." It was actually happening to me! Why hadn't I got into this theater business before? Two days later, Owen Davis was again whispering on the telephone. "Max Gordon wants it, too."

It was sure goin' to be hard to go back to pecking where no one ever called up with exciting news.

While I was still floating on these Broadway clouds, Owen called again. "Alfred de Liagre wants it, too."

I could hardly believe my ears and asked Owen again just to make sure. "That's right," he whispered. "And he's one of the best producers in town."

"Have we really got three managers who want to produce it?" I gasped.

"That's all so far," breathed Owen.

Never in his life, he said, had he had so many managers, in such a short time, fighting to produce a play. "Well, that's the way things go," I said modestly.

I continued to live in a fairy world that I had never known before existed. And now, under the excitement of it, I just about gave up my pecking. Me for the theater.

Vinton Freedley had been the first to accept it, so the play went to him. Owen called with more good news—the play would be tried out in the summer stock company theater in Skowhegan, Maine. The very theater that had tried out "Life With Father."

This dazzling fairy world continued to swirl around me. Owen Davis Jr. called up and asked me if I would come down and see if I liked the four children he had talked to for the part. I floated down to the RKO Building where Vinton Freedley had his office. I hadn't the slightest idea in the world whether they fitted the parts, or not. But no one suspected this by the way I studied and weighed and pondered, for I might be settling the very fate and fortune of those children.

A day or two later I was called again. Would I come down and see what I thought of the colored woman who might be able to play the maid's part? I went down and settled her fate and fortune, too.

The wonderful, the glorious, the exciting, days went by and, at last, I found myself in Skowhegan, Maine, shaking hands with Herbert E. Swett, who had built up this, the oldest stock company in America; and with Melville Burke, his director; and soon I was face to face with the players who were going to project my honeymoon idea across the footlights. And there were the four children, just as I had said they should be; and the colored maid, just as I had propounded.

Up from New York had come big-wigs to see the play. But I let them see me first, strolling here and there on the lawn, so they could see with their own eyes what the author of the first unpublished-but-produced-in-play form novel looked like. They didn't seem much impressed. In fact, they took it with immense calm.

When the great evening came, my wife and I arranged to sit in different parts of the theater so that we would not influence each other, but Owen Davis and his wife were old hands at this and plunked down side by side. The curtain went up and there were the actors speaking my lines (out of Owen Davis) and projecting my thoughts (sired by Croy).

Soon the audience was responding to the professor bewildered by his new family, and my heart started to beat again. That first laugh!

At last the performance was over. Owen Davis, who has a peculiarly aloof point of view on his own plays, once they are on view, said: "I think that second act curtain, when the four children come and climb into Mamma's bed, is the biggest laugh curtain I ever saw." I said I thought well of it, too.

Herbert E. Swett, who has seen so many shows that he can't bear to sit at one more than ten minutes, said: "That's about the funniest show I ever put on in this theater."

"I liked it from the first," I said modestly.

There had been problems; the children were hard to direct and had been noisy, but the play idea was there, and the audience liked it. Vinton Freedley shook us by the hand and talked about when he would "open." The next day he climbed into the plane and, full of enthusiasm, went back to New York.

The children learned their places and the play got better; and it began to "build," as we theatrical people call it. Herbert E. Swett said: "I'd like to have a slice of that play. I turned down the opportunity on 'Life With Father' and I don't want to do it again."

"I'll see what I can do for you," I said.

The play continued to draw. In fact, it broke a two years' top and still, as I set these words on paper, has the record since Ethel Barrymore. I was growing more and more proud of myself . . . why hadn't I got into theatrical business long, long ago? The Maine papers reviewed it. Very fine, indeed; I couldn't have done better myself.

Then came the last night. Vinton Freedley was to be there to see the changes, and to sign the Broadway production contract. But there was a storm and he had to leave his plane in Boston, and didn't get to our last night. Then, the next day, he went back to New York. But still everything was all right.

Then came something I never dreamed of and I had my first glimpse of what chance does in the theater. Variety gave it a bad review. The local man had come from Portland and had seen it that first night. He hadn't liked it and had said so. Never before had I realized the tremendous influence that Variety wields in its field, and now I saw there was indeed reason for it to be called The Bible of Broadway. Vinton Freedley lost enthusiasm for the play and decided, finally, to spend his time on musicals. When the agent took the play to other managers they said, "If it's so good, why didn't Freedley bring it to town?" A hard question to answer. And Hollywood said, "It failed, didn't it?"

The book came out in due time, and got good reviews, but the play had a black eye and no beefsteak we could put on would do any good.

After a time the excitement was over and I was again back at my pecking.

I have always been interested in how an author gets that first idea. Some of mine have come from definite and concrete happenings, as I have already mentioned. But sometimes writers don't remember where their ideas came from, or how they got them. In this connection I think of Howard Lindsay. I was invited to dinner with him and Dorothy Stickney, his wife. As we were talking before dinner, he said: "This afternoon I was reading to Dorothy a collection of stories by Clarence Day about his father. I told Dorothy I thought the stories might, somehow, be turned into a play."

He went on to say he didn't know how it could be done, but that a central idea had come to him. And this was that the father and mother should clash all the way through the play, and that the father should be drawn as blustery and the mother soft and gentle—and that she should be the one to win out.

One afternoon, after the play was running, I was in his dressing room and mentioned that I had seen him the very day he had had that first flash. But by now the central idea for the play was so well established in his mind and so much a part of him that he had forgotten how and when he'd first gotten it.

Turn Your Tin Cans Into Handy Footstool

THE "sitting room" of two generations ago was cozy and planned for use. Not the least of its comforts were the late footstools to be used with the most frequent chairs. These were covered with bright carpet or other heavy material and, if you examined them, you found that inside there were cans filled with sand for weight and then bound together and padded.

Such a stool cost not a cent. Nor did it require any carpenter work. Mother or the girls could put one together in no time from things on hand and there it was ready for years of service. You can do the same. The diagrams in this sketch show exactly how to go about it.

NOTE—This footstool is from BOOK 3 of the series offered with these articles. This book also contains more than 30 other things to make for your home from odds and ends plus inexpensive new materials. Booklets are 15 cents each postpaid and requests should be sent to:

My Dear Mrs. Kruspe: It seems that your tardiness, in expressing my hearty thanks for your very lovely Xmas package is almost as great as Orland's generosity. For the tardiness I am truly sorry and for yours and Orland's generosity, I am truly and deeply appreciative and thankful. The delay in writing was of course not without reason. I have been busy doing some traveling as you have probably noted by my new address. This naturally has curtailed my letter writing so that Mrs. Dunn has even reprimanded me in the last several weeks. However, Mrs. Kruspe, I hope that the old adage, 'Bel-

Train Three-One-One to yardmaster . . ."
Yes, radio communication has been tested, and it's working on the ROCK ISLAND LINES.

Almost a year ago, ROCK ISLAND was the first railroad to receive its own permit from the Federal Communications Commission to test radio in connection with the operation of its trains. Regular installations were made, engineer-to-conductor-to-flagman, train-to-yardmaster.

The ROCK ISLAND LINES established an Electronics Department. Experiments also include transmission of written messages in facsimile by radio, induction and radio telephone between engine and caboose and between stations and moving trains, portable short-wave radios that automatically bridge gaps in storm-damaged communication lines . . . and microwave-radar developments.

This is another practical example of the working of ROCK ISLAND LINES' Program of Planned Progress. Yesterday's planning provided a war-ready transportation system which is doing its wartime job with notable efficiency. Today's planning will provide finer, safer, swifter transportation . . . tomorrow!

Mrs. Maynard Hayhurst believes her husband, a marine, in the 3rd division is on the island of Iwo Jima at this time, since letters she has received dated February 24 and 26 indicated he expected to land there shortly. The following excerpts are taken from his letter: "I am still aboard ship today and we are close enough to shore to see some of the action, the smoke and dust on the island and everything but the men moving about. We hear the big naval guns and lots of firing. I have seen many Jap planes shot down. Expect you folks at home hear more news about Iwo than we do here as all of our news is from the states and is usually about three days late. At least the Marines here have plenty of naval and air support. The boys on the island are having a tough time of it. I hope you are not worrying about me as I am as safe as can be here aboard ship. What do you think we do? Well, most of the time we just sit down and watch for awhile, and then get a book or magazine and read. Not very exciting is it? Am anxious to get into some real action soon."

"PLANNED PRODUCTION"

BOOSTS WARTIME PORK OUTPUT

"Old Hands" at hog raising are learning new tricks. Yes, they're going back to school to attend swine production classes where they're learning that bigger and better pig crops are the result of careful planning and the acceptance of approved hog raising practices.

To help you remove the luck element in hog raising, we offer this quick lesson—if reading it saves you one pig, your time will have been well spent:

WHAT TO DO BEFORE THE DOCTOR COMES

Keep brood sows healthy; feed them rations complete in every respect. Clean pigs start with clean sows and farrowing pens, so scrub pens with lye water; wash sides and udders of sows with warm water and soap before placing the sows in dry, bedded farrowing pens. Keep sows comfortable for easy handling when farrowing.

Have electric brooders on hand to provide the warmth and protection that newly-arrived baby pigs need during their first critical days. Lost baby pigs mean lost feed, lost time, lost profit. Statistics prove that brooders save an average of 1½ more pigs per litter. (Plans for economical, homemade brooders are yours for the asking. Simply phone or drop a card to this company.)

PLAN YOUR PASTURING

Generally speaking, sows and young pigs are moved to clean pastures 2 or 3 weeks after farrowing. Portable hog houses make excellent shelters on ranges; they can easily be shifted to different pastures that have been kept clean and disease-free through crop rotation. Clean clover pastures are good.

LET 'EM MAKE HOGS OF THEMSELVES

Keep them on the range about four months. Then bring them onto the feeding floor and full-feed them until they hit 200 pounds. Give them plenty of clean, fresh water—a hog that drinks more is healthier, gains faster. And the faster they fatten up, the quicker they go to market... something that "boarders" don't do.

Electricity is available for hog-raising and other farm chores on 86% of the farms in the area served by

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

Warmth and Protection for baby pigs is provided by the twenty electric brooders in use on the Dean Hopkins' farm, Mazon. Now—before baby pigs begin to arrive—is the time to get your brooders ready.

Solve the Housing Problem. Portable hog houses promote sanitation, provide good shelter, can be moved from pasture to pasture with the pigs. Washburn "Ag" students work on these "pig palaces".

Excellent Example of Modern Swine Production can be found on the Norman Reigel farm near Peotone where running water, water warmer, lights, brooders, and cement feeding floor help cut cost, boost profits.

The Mokena Troop 40, of the Boy Scouts, is in the midst of a waste paper campaign with a quota set for every boy at 1000 pounds. The citizens of Mokena and vicinity have responded excellently in support of the efforts of the boys. Many have refused to sell to other solicitors so that the boys may have a better opportunity to reach their quotas. This is evidence of a fine community spirit. The campaign ends officially on April 8.

Mokena Women's Service Club:

Dear Ladies:

I wish to take this opportunity to thank each and every one, responsible for the grand package I received from your organization. It's hard to put into words just how much a fellow far from home appreciates the fact that the folks from home haven't forgotten them. I have been in Mokena many many times, but as I'm not a native I appreciate your kindness all the more. Mokena is my Dad's home at present and a swell little town. The person or persons responsible in the selection of the gift items should be congratulated on their good taste, the gifts were just what a service man needs.

Hoping to see you all in person soon and thanking you again I remain,

Sincerely,
George Jacobsen

Hello Folks:

I thought I would drop you a line to thank you for the swell birthday card and for the present too. I'm sure going to have use for it if I ever get out of here for my Boot Leave.

I should have had it about three weeks ago but we weren't doing much so I thought I would like to do something different so I got scarlet fever and took what we call a vacation of three weeks with pay.

I've only got two days to go and then my vacation will be over and I'll have to go back and finish my boot then I'll get my leave and get rid of all the money they give me and go back and wait to be drafted again.

You might hear a lot of sailors kicking on how hard boot is but if they ever stop and look back they'll see that they had a lot of good times too. Well I guess that's all for now good luck.

Sincerely,
Dick Fisher

Dear Friends:

I believe it is about time that I sit down and write a few lines and thank you for the swell Christmas box that I received about a month ago, it sure is a big help to know that the people back home are still thinking of you.

I am still in Tampa but my outfit has moved to Drew Field. I am still an M. P. riding between two cities and the weather down here has sure been nice and warm, but I would still like to see some snow, all we see down here is sand and water and a few oranges.

Well thanks again for the swell Christmas box and I sure hope that it won't be too long before all the fellows will be back in good old Tinley Park again.

As ever,

Dear Friends:

I really don't know if I should blame it on to myself or the necessary time devoted to our work the past few months, but the fact still remains that I haven't written to thank you for that swell Christmas package which I received a month ago. service we really appreciate it.

I still get the Times pretty regular but it sure is swell to read about good old Tinley. As you know it will be four years this coming June that I left Tinley to go in the Army and haven't been in Tinley since and will have three years overseas in a couple more months, and still no sign coming back for awhile.

I see that John Lehman is back for twenty one days furlough. We both left the States the same time and got to Australia the same day. He is the only fellow I met from Tinley since I've been overseas in fact I met him in Australia and again in New Guinea.

Well I just can't think of much more to say so I will close for now hoping that these few lines find you all in the best of health.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Citizens Service Comm.

I must take time and write you a few lines. It sure has been a long time since I wrote to you but with all the moving we've done I just didn't get time to write, but first of all I must not forget to thank you for the nice Xmas box you sent me and I am still getting the Tinley Park Times and sure enjoy reading them.

Well we sure didn't have much snow here yet but not much rain either but it sure is cold here in France. We had a nice Xmas dinner I suppose you will notice that my address has changed.

Well I don't know of anything else to write about but you sure don't know how much that means to the boys to get something from your friends and so I must thank you and all the folks in Tinley for the fine work you are doing. Thanks again.

Dear Folks:

I received your "Get Well" card when I was in the dispensary and want to thank you very much for your thoughtfulness. I was released for duty on last Thursday and begin classes in my radio technician training again tomorrow morning. Still have two more months on this base. My original class is leaving in just two weeks. It makes me pretty heart sick to know this too for I planned originally to leave with them, but I guess a case of scarlet fever is beyond self control.

The Times has been reaching me in marvelous time always get it by Tuesday noon, so I keep up well on Tinley news. I want to give you my new address so that the paper reaches me as quickly.

Thanks again for your thoughtfulness and I hope it isn't too long before I see you again. I hope my next station will be Navy Pier.

Best regards to all,

Dear Mr. Semmler:

Just a few lines to say hello and to inform you of my new address. I miss receiving the Times paper and would like to be receiving it. There is nothing that interests us boys more than to read about and know what's going on in our home community. As you will notice I am now back in Italy. I know last year when I was here I sure enjoyed receiving and reading the home town paper. Well I will come to a close for now and hope this letter finds you in the best of health.

PLOW — and FERTILIZE in One Operation

HERE'S a profitable new method for feeding crops . . . the McCormick-Deering Plowsole Fertilizer Attachment for use on most makes of moldboard plows with 10, 12, 14 and 16-inch bottoms. This attachment places large amounts of fertilizer for crops safely in the furrow bottom where it can be utilized most efficiently by the plant roots.

Other advantages: it minimizes the effect of mid-season drought by providing plant food in moist soil during the entire growing season; it retards conversion of applied nitrogen fertilizer to nitrates in which form it could move out of the root zone; it minimizes fixation of phosphate and potash with the soil in unavailable forms; it ties in with corn borer control where clean plowing is desired; and it lessens early weed growth in wet seasons.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

BY HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for March 18

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

THE LAW OF LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 25:31-46.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matthew 22:37-39.

Our lesson presents a great judgment scene—majestic, solemn, stirring. Many confuse it with the judgment of the Great White Throne in Revelation 20. But Matthew 25 is obviously the judgment of nations (v. 32) for their treatment of Christ's brethren (v. 40), a word referring primarily to Jews, but also spoken of in Matthew 12:48-50.

The lesson needs broader application, however, so we suggest that we allow the more general principles of judgment occupy our attention. We note that

I. Judgment Divides (vv. 31-33).

The nations, coming before Christ when He shall have appeared in all His glory, shall find themselves separated into two groups on the basis of their treatment of the brethren of Christ.

The fact that God has drawn a line of division down through all humanity and that each one of us is on one side or the other is not a doctrine which finds ready acceptance with modern thinking, but it is nonetheless a fact.

No man established that division—God Himself did it, and did it in love. To some it may seem to be a hard saying, but it is not, for it comes from the lips of the gentle, loving Jesus.

It is because He loved us enough to give Himself for us that any of us find ourselves on the side of that dividing line which assures us of eternal joy and blessedness.

They who stand on the other side of the line do so because they have not accepted God's proffered salvation in Christ. Reader, where do you stand?

II. Judgment Declares (vv. 34-45).

Our attitude toward God expresses itself in our attitude toward our fellow man. That which we do toward those about us is not a matter of indifference, but is the basis for God's judgment of our lives. Each of us must answer for the deeds done in the flesh whether they be good or evil. That is true even of the believer (II Cor. 5:10), whose salvation has already been determined by his faith in Christ.

Here in our lesson, however, the failure to do that which shows forth God's law of love is made the ground of eternal judgment. This is not because an act of kindness itself can be regarded as the ground of division, but because the failure to give it or do it reflects an attitude of heart toward our God and His Christ, which is in reality a rejection of His way of salvation.

Judgment is thus a revelation of the attitude of the heart, which marks a man or woman as being either saved or lost. It may be possible to so becloud the thinking of our friends and neighbors that we may go through life looking something like a Christian, but when Christ judges, it will all be revealed to us.

Notice the importance of a proper attitude toward those who need our kindness and help. All too often the only concern of men and women is to look out for "number one" and let the rest of the world shift for itself.

Observe also that the Lord identifies Himself with His brethren—what is done to and for them is counted as done to and for Him. Compare the experience of Samuel (I Sam. 8:7) and of Paul (Acts 9:5). Touch God's people and you touch Him. Fail them and you fail Him. Serve them and you serve Him.

III. Judgment Determines (v. 46).

Yes, God's judgment determines eternal destiny. Life eternal, or everlasting punishment, which shall it be? That is determined by God's final word of judgment, but remember that He judges in accordance with the attitude of heart and action of life on this side of the grave.

Now, for that matter, is a part of eternity, and it is consequently of great importance that we are right with both God and man now if we expect to be right throughout eternity.

We need to face this truth of judgment with complete candor and honest heart-searching. We agree with Dr. Douglass that "we must stand with awful concern before this solemn truth. Do not hesitate to teach this because it is contrary to the current of modern thinking or shocking to confront. It needs to be faced in a brave spirit of realism. (As a teacher) you will do your pupils a great disservice if you try to shield them from the grim implications of this truth."

Yes, and also if you keep from them the glorious prospect of eternal joy in the presence of God. The law of life is the law of love—love for God, and for Jesus Christ whom He hath sent to be our Redeemer, and love for His brethren. That law of love rules even in the day of judgment.

HOW HALSEY BOMBED FILIPINOS

Adm. William F. "Bull" Halsey tells this dramatic story about the invasion of Luzon.

"Just before we went into Luzon, I called all the Filipino stewards and messboys on my flagship together. I showed them a map of Luzon and pointed out the Japanese positions that MacArthur had told me not to shell for fear of hurting some Filipino civilians.

"I told them that the only way to get the Japs out would be to shell these key points.

"One of the messboys stepped forward and said that the marked-out positions included his home. I asked him if he thought we should shell it.

"Is that the only way to get the Japs out?" he asked me. I replied that it was.

"Then if you don't mind, sir," the messboy told me, "shoot the so-an-so's out to hell."

"We shelled those defenses, we killed a few Filipinos, but we got all the Japs."

ARMY SPEED UP

Senators studying the military picture have learned that the army ground forces command has been quietly cutting down on the training given to infantrymen before going into front-line action.

Infantrymen are now sometimes being shipped overseas without any advanced training. Some now find themselves in the front line only six months after having donned uniform. It is still longer than the average in the last war, however. Meanwhile, men are being yanked out of the air corps and services of supply and transferred to the infantry. Already supposed to be well-seasoned, they get an additional seven weeks' training and are then moved outside the country as replacements.

One new departure from practice in the last war is that few divisions have been withdrawn from action in their entirety for a thorough rest. Instead, once a division is in the line, it receives replacements, but no real vacation, for months. Congressmen returning from the war front have criticized this policy to army higher-ups.

General Bradley has tried to move green divisions into relatively quiet sectors for seasoning, but his intelligence hasn't always been able to gauge what the enemy considers a quiet sector.

LABOR MANAGEMENT

The scene is the lobby of Washington's fashionable Mayflower hotel. A modest, businesslike, gray-haired man walks over to the house phone, picks it up.

"Room 633," he says, and then after a brief pause, "Eric, this is Bill, shall I come up?"

The conversation is between the representatives of two one-time bitter foes, AFL Bill Green and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Eric Johnston, preparing to spend an evening together discussing the mutual problems of labor and management. When Johnston first became president of the U. S. chamber, he immediately called on Green and Phil Murray, suggesting closer cooperation in the public interest. They have been good friends ever since.

FRANCE AND THE BIG THREE

Those who sat at Roosevelt's elbow during the Yalta conference give a new slant to the reasons why sensitive General De Gaulle was not invited to join the big three. They say that neither the President nor Prime Minister Churchill had any objection to De Gaulle's presence, but felt rather neutral about it. Stalin was the man who opposed it. Stalin, according to those returning from Yalta, pointed out that this was to be primarily a military conference and France was only playing a minor role in the war. Since the Big Three were bearing the main brunt of the war, Stalin said he saw no point in having De Gaulle sit in on a conference concerned largely with military strategy.

The Russian war chief was quite definite and repeated the point that if the Yalta conference were concerned primarily with political and economic postwar problems, it would be different. But when military matters were being discussed, he just didn't want De Gaulle around.

Then to clinch his views, Stalin recalled that France surrendered to Germany early in the war, and refused to turn over the French fleet to the British as per treaty.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Inflation hit the elections last year. Contributions to senatorial campaigns in 1940 were only $787,000, compared with $1,495,000 in 1944. Expenditures were $1,139,000 in 1940 compared with $1,702,000 in 1944.

Lt. Will Rogers Jr., former congressman, and son of the late great humorist, is writing to friends with a German typewriter. His unit captured a typewriter factory in St. Vith which was turning out machines for the Germans. With his own portable lost, Rogers adopted a German machine.

WHAT ARE THE FACTS?

A Republican caucus was held on the 20th day of February, 1945, at the Midlothian Lions Clubhouse, where only precinct captains and delegates chosen by the Central Committee were permitted to vote, and the Republican voters were denied an opportunity to nominate candidates of their own choosing.

On February 21st, 1945, a Democratic caucus was held, a caucus the voters of the Democratic party knew nothing about. Notice of this caucus was published in the Chicago Sunday Sun on February 11th and the place designated for the caucus was the Lions Clubhouse in Midlothian. The caucus was actually held at Federow's Hall.

Altho this is not a Republican and Democratic election they attempted to convey the idea that only the Republican and Democratic parties could have tickets in this township election—but the Republican and Democratic voters were denied the opportunity to nominate candidates for these tickets. Were they not seeking to dictate the election?

The certificates of the caucus of both parties were filed at the same time. Was there a deal between them?

When the Bremen Taxpayers' petition went out, and they knew that their attempt to dictate the election by means of their caucus had failed, they immediately filed the Progressive Non-Partisan ticket. This ticket contained the names of the "self chosen" who had intended to run on the respective Republican and Democratic tickets and destroy all opposition. The little fellows were "scratched". They were going to "scratch" them anyway.

After the "self chosen" filed the Progressive so called Non-Partisan ticket they withdrew from the Republican and Democratic tickets. Would they have withdrawn if they really believed in them as proper Township tickets? At the time they withdrew, however, they filed objections to the Bremen Taxpayers' ticket on the theory that only Republican and Democratic tickets could run. They still hoped to dictate the election.

Can there be any other opinion but that the filing of the Progressive Non-Partisan party petition by the Republicans and Democrats who were at that time also on the Republican and Democratic caucus slates, was either the culmination of a vicious political trick sought to be perpetrated upon the people with the design of preventing the people from choosing their own candidates or filing by petition, or that it was an attempt by the self styled Non-Partisan Republicans and Democrats to double-cross the other members of their own respective political party slates and the people of their respective parties? Was theirs?

This is our fight for an open and fair election, our fight—not the fight of the candidates alone whose names appear to the left—but our fight, the fight of all good citizens of this Township. We protest against the attempt to sign, seal and deliver the election before there was one—we object to attempts to prevent fair and free elections and fair and free opposition. The filing of the ticket appearing to the left forced the self styled Non-Partisans into, merely an opportunity to vote for the candidates they saw fit to put upon their ticket. It is our duty, the duty of all good citizens, to say effectively at the election on April 3rd that this shall not happen again—that the people of this Township intend to and shall always vote as they choose and without dictation.
